A RELUCTANT STAR?

Helen Mirren pops up this month in one of her earliest films, Ken Russell's Savage Messiah. Thirty or so years on, she has learned a great deal more about her craft, and yet confides in me that she feels no more self-confident now than she did then. 'No, but I am more able to handle my lack of self-confidence,' she explains. It seems incredible to think of Mirren, the epitome of cool assurance on both stage and screen, as a bag of uncertainties. And yet she is, which is why she rarely reads her own reviews. 'Especially when I'm in a play. It's less painful in a film, because you don't have to do it the following night.'

Still, it is not as if Mirren's reviews are often stinkers. Quite the reverse. And, of course, she received enormous acclaim for her performances as Detective Chief Inspector Jane Tennison in the Prime Suspect dramas – a character, she tells me, who might soon be revived. 'A script is being written, and then we will see. I needed to take time away from her, but maybe now is the time to do more. Partly because there is a lot to be said for a franchise, and to have in your pocket a high level of public awareness all over the world. There is already an audience in place, and that's what you're always fighting for.'

I ask Mirren whether it is true that Lynda La Plante, the creator of Prime Suspect, told her to stop smiling in the role of Tennison? 'In the first episode, yes. She made a very good point, that women use their smiles to charm and manipulate, but my character didn't need to. She was not in the business of charming or manipulating.'

Unlike the very charming, not terribly self-confident, and yet rather redoubtable, Helen Mirren.

Savage Messiah, TCM, Tuesday 8th, 1.05am

THE GOLDEN TOUCH

The Golden Girls is back on British TV this month. For those who don't know what it's all about, picture this (as the show's Sophia would say): four friends in their 'golden' years, blessed with razor-sharp wit and charm, share the same house. There's over-sexed Blanche, caustic teacher Dorothy, nice-but-dim Rose and outspoken Sophia (Dorothy's mother), and they all interact in a manner more in keeping with teenagers than OAPs.

I call Rue McClanahan, who plays sex-obsessed, ageing Southern belle Blanche Devereaux, and impertinently ask whether she resembled her frivolous, man-eating character? 'No, no, I'm a very serious person,' she says, although if we were in the same room I think I might spot the tongue in her cheek.

So, has she been married to the same man for 40 years? 'Erm, no dear. I always wanted a solid home life, so I quickly had a child with my first husband, but he left, so I married my best friend, then, let me see, there was the Italian, then another, then my boyfriend from old high school, then four years ago I married my sixth, who's definitely my last one.'

It sounds as if she was a good choice for Blanche. 'Well, I desperately wanted to play her. But I don't really know why, from the time I was a sophomore in college, I was cast as the whore, or the courtesan, or the hot-tempered blue-collar girlfriend. I always thought my sister was more of a vamp than I was.'

The Golden Girls, LivingTV, weekdays, 3.00pm; weekends, from 10.00am

Shawnee's glory

It takes serious sleight of hand to steal a comedy scene from under the nose of Cheers veteran Ted Danson, but in Becker, the sitcom starring Danson as a doctor, Shawnee Smith does just that. Again and again. And Danson acknowledges it.

'Ted's always joking, "I get to make a speech three-quarters of a page long and you come in with one line right after it and get the big laugh,"' says Smith, who plays to perfection the scatty secretary Linda.

She is 29 now, and with some impressive movie cameos behind her – for instance as a memorable biker's moll in Leaving Las Vegas – seemingly on the brink of the big time. That said, the big time also beckoned when she was a teenager. As well as some high-profile TV parts, she landed a lead role opposite Kevin Dillon in a 1988 remake of The Blob, and even a role on Broadway opposite Richard Dreyfuss. But her career never quite took off.

'The people handling me weren't all that careful about my choices,' she says now. 'I just got burned out.'

This time round she's making her choices more carefully, and improving her career prospects no end by making a name for herself as lead singer for the splendidly named Fydolla Ho. Scatty, in fact, is the one thing she ain't.

Eve's dropping

Trevor Eve, who stars this month in Waking the Dead, the acclaimed drama series in which he plays a detective specialising in unsolved cases, is not only entitled to share a page with Annabel Croft (below right), he is also equipped to share a tennis court with her. Sue Barker once told me that Eve was one of the finest amateur tennis players she had ever seen. He recalls being umpired by John McEnroe. 'Even as an umpire he managed to lose his temper,' he tells me.

Growing up near Birmingham, however, Eve's principle sport was cricket and he intended to turn professional, but instead studied architecture. Then he jacked that in and enrolled at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art. He got his big break soon after graduating, playing Paul McCartney at the Liverpool Everyman in Willy Russell's hit play John, Paul, George, Ringo and Bert.

The Beatles had their Maharishi, so it's apt that in 1974 Eve acquired a guru of sorts, in the form of Laurence Olivier, who took a shine to him at an audition. 'I was swept off my feet by him,' says Eve. 'He was very sweet and always included me, so there I was, aged 25, having dinner with the Oliviers, and Paul Newman and Joanna Woodward, or whoever turned up. Olivier had an unbelievable sense of fun. So did Donald Pleasence, whom I got to know well. It sounds such a cliché, but they wanted to live every minute to the maximum.

'Every evening there was a wonderful celebratory dinner. I'm not sure where all that went. Now people say, "I'm going to my room". Not with those guys you couldn't.'

Ace high

Annabel Croft, wife of yachtsman-turned-banker Mel Coleman, and mother of Lily, Charlie and Amber, has a new string to her bow. Or racquet. She is the new face of British Eurosport, which this month screens the Australian Open, and much of the Winter Olympics.

Croft's own tennis career concluded when she was just 21. By then she had been officially ranked as the world's 21st best female player, and had won a tournament in San Diego by beating Wendy Turnbull, then ranked fourth in the world, in the final. I ask her the obvious question. Any regrets? 'Perhaps I should have stuck at it longer,' she says. 'I think I could have been a top 10 player and probably should have been. But I'd worked so hard to get to 21 in the rankings, and mentally I couldn't face the climb up to top 10. Also, you don't make really true friends on tour because you know you're going to have to face them sooner or later. It was a funny existence. I was fearful that if I stayed, I might never get married or have children.'

So, Croft retired at an age when most people are still looking for a career, not jettisoning one. But when Channel 4 invited her to spend time on a desert island with a varied bunch of characters, including a stockbroker and a convict, for an embryonic version of Survivor, she realised she had a knack for broadcasting. And so did the makers of Treasure Hunt, who promptly hired her as presenter.

Her TV career has gone from strength to strength, while her tennis has gone in the opposite direction. Does she still play? 'I try to play once a week. And I still absolutely love it. It's frustrating. I don't have the feel any more, and my serve is horrendously rusty, but I'm a member of the All-England Club, which is about as privileged as you can get.'

Australian Open, British Eurosport, Monday 14th to Sunday 27th

IN PRODUCTION

George's best

Dashing leading man George Clooney could pick and choose the most prestigious film parts. But that doesn't stop him opting for the less conventional roles.

Words: Graham Oliver

Maybe it was the less than satisfying experience he had on the last Batman movie, but George Clooney seems to have been steering clear of obvious blockbuster material of late. Clooney cultists expecting the actor to flex his pecs in another explosive action outing may have been left feeling bemused by the dark, absurdist Gulf War adventure Three Kings, and his least glamorous role to date in the Coen brothers' O, Brother, Where Art Thou?.

But his latest left-field film project, Confessions of a Dangerous Mind, in which he makes his feature directorial debut, is set to be the strangest yet. It is based on the dubious autobiography of Chuck Barris, the diminutive host of Seventies series The Gong Show, in which a parade of terminally terrible acts hawked their desperate entertainment wares under threat of being 'gonged' off the stage by celebrity panellists. Hailed as a comic masterpiece on publication in the early 1980s, the book offers up choice behind-the-scenes info on the TV shows Barris worked on, as well as revealing his secret links to the CIA. Clooney has cast himself in the role of the CIA operative who recruited the small-screen star, while cult character actor Sam Rockwell (The Green Mile) adds another oddball role to his repertoire as Barris. Julia Roberts and Drew Barrymore have also been linked with the film. Currently shooting in Canadian locations, this bizarre biopic is slated for a November release.

But Clooney is back in reassuring mainstream mode in the remake of the rat pack caper Ocean's Eleven, due for release next month. Also appearing are Brad Pitt, Matt Damon and Julia Roberts.

PUPPY LOVE

It took 46 years, but finally you can see the follow-up to one of the most heart-warming animated films ever, when Lady and the Tramp 2: Scamp's Adventure premieres on Disney channel in March. Scamp, the son of Lady and the Tramp, is a mischievous pup whose desire to explore the world leads him to run away and join a gang of junkyard dogs. Scott Wolf (Party of Five), Alyssa Milano (Charmed) and Mickey Rooney all lend their vocal talents to the film.

HEY, BABY

The highs and lows of pregnancy and birth will be explored in Birth Day Girls, a new series set to start on LivingTV this spring. The cameras will follow six women in the lead up to their big day, and they will keep a video diary to record their anxieties and thoughts. The subjects include a couple expecting twins, a single teenage mum and a couple who conceived through IVF treatment.

ACTING UP

There's a diverse line-up in store on Inside the Actors' Studio (Performance) over the coming months. Ed Harris, Alan Alda, Burt Reynolds and Helen Hunt will be sharing their trade secrets next month, and double Oscar-winning acting veteran Gene Hackman will be in the Studio with James Lipton and the students in March.

LUCKY GELLAR

Fangs ain't what they used to be with Buffy, which recently changed channels in the US. But despite initial disapproval, star Sarah Michelle Gellar believes the move has given the sixth series a boost. Interview: Lawrie Masterson

Sarah Michelle Gellar started her most recent hiatus from Buffy the Vampire Slayer with her future in the hit show in serious doubt – and not just because her title character was dead.

In Buffy creator Joss Whedon's world death is not necessarily final – but there were other ominous signs. The producer of the series, 20th Century Fox Television, had started negotiations to move the show from America's WB cable network, its home since its inception five years ago, to UPN, and 24-year-old Gellar had threatened to quit in protest.

As the negotiations continued she and her boyfriend, actor Freddie Prinze Jr (star of movies such as I Know What You Did Last Summer and She's All That) went to Australia to work on the Scooby-Doo movie. By the time they returned a lot had changed. Not only did Buffy the Vampire Slayer have a new home at UPN – now with Gellar's hard-won approval – but she and Prinze were engaged to be married.

'I know it's the best time of my life and I am really happy, and that just makes everything easier,' Gellar says.

'Obviously, there had been so much drama about where the show was going, but all that stuff was behind the scenes and didn't really affect us when we came in the first day. You knew that something was different but, in fact, nothing was different except that we had better craft services and a much better coffee machine and we were really excited.

'I think that a lot of times when shows go into their sixth season people are saying, "Well, OK, this is now just a means to an end and we'll see how bad the show gets". But by moving to UPN and kind of starting anew, it was almost like getting a second chance.

'This, to me, is almost like a brand new character. I'm finding new things to do with her every day and that's exciting, because when you play a character for six years, the worst trap to fall into is that it's too easy, it's boring.'

A fresh start with Buffy emerging from her coffin, season highlights such as a musical episode written by Whedon, and the promise of an intense relationship between Buffy and the surly English vampire Spike (James Marsters) are only part of what obviously is a great time for Gellar.

The petite blonde almost glows when she speaks about her engagement to the tall, dark-haired Prinze Jr. 'He completes me,' Gellar says.

The attractive couple are not fixtures on the Los Angeles club scene, preferring to spend their free time at the home they share with their two dogs.

'What he does is give me a life which is completely separate from everything I do and when we go home at night it's just Freddie and Sarah. We have a pool table and we have friends come over and we barbecue and play board games and take our dogs out for walks. It's all that other stuff that sometimes you have a tendency to lose in this industry.

'We're very lucky and I'm grateful for that. You know, people say we're young, but age is just a time-counter. It doesn't really represent anything.

'He's an amazing chef. We eventually plan to open a restaurant, because I have all these ideas about decor and how a restaurant should look and be run and his food is unreal.

'My cooking skills leave a little something to be desired. I'm mean with a can of spaghetti. Notice I said can? I can boil water real well.'

No date has been set for their wedding. 'We just want to take our time with it and enjoy each part of it,' Gellar says. 'The idea of planning a wedding is fabulous and wonderful, but I sit there and look at all those bridal magazines every day and get myself absolutely more confused.

'The fact that we haven't set a date is just due to how do you know that this date is better than that one? All my friends certainly have no problems telling me which dates work for them, but ...' cg

SURVIVAL of the FITTEST

Olympian Matthew Pinsent fronts a new programme challenging the conventions of sports science. Interview: Ross Biddiscombe

BEING SUPREMELY FIT FOR rowing is part of everyday life for triple Olympic gold medallist Matthew Pinsent. But how eight ordinary men and women can become fit for two gruelling physical tests in just five weeks is beyond him. This fitness challenge, investigated in the five-part series Fighting Fit, intrigued Matthew so much that he became a rookie presenter for the programme.

The series chronicles how two teams were trained for two tests – a one-day triathlon (swimming, gym tests and a 5km run) and a march across the Snowdonia mountains. But each team of four was trained in a totally different way to explore the classic conflict – do modern scientific training developments make a real difference to athletic performance or are traditional methods just as good?

Team Science were trained with the emphasis on sports psychology, gym workouts and scientific analysis, while Team Tradition were treated to some of the British Army's standard training methods, which included endurance marches, canoeing and even a parachute jump.

Matthew was amazed with the progress that everyone made. 'It's impressive that eight people from different backgrounds, with only normal fitness levels, have been stirred to go out and get so much fitter on this programme. All of them have improved by dramatic amounts,' he says.

But the actual difference in the training regimes wasn't as pronounced as Matthew thought. 'Although we called the two teams different names, there was an element of science and tradition in both their programmes. For instance, the army certainly did not include any squad bashing while Team Science still had to sweat just as much as the others,' he says.

The fitness guinea pigs ranged in age from 22 to 40, came from various walks of life (a housewife, an archaeology graduate and a fireman) and even included a set of twins (one on each team) to provide even more compelling evidence of the effectiveness of each training method.

The army instructor Staff Sergeant Russell Clash put together a distillation of the normal 12 weeks of basic training for Team Tradition and focused on their teamwork, which would help during the march in the Welsh hills.

Team Science, under the guidance of sports psychologist Jonathan Zneiner, used computer-based technology to show them how to improve, experienced a hypoxic chamber to simulate high-altitude training and received plenty of subtle psychological motivation.

'This is the kind of training that I'm familiar with,' says Matthew, 'but however much science we put in as modern professional athletes, there's no shortcut to fitness.'

Matthew was keen to find out which team would perform best, but realised that there were no losers. 'It made for a very interesting experiment, but the fact was that they all made fantastic progress and I am proud of what they all accomplished.' cg

The new series of hit US drama ER – its eighth – promises some high-profile departures and the return of one of its favourite characters. By David Spedding

BACK on call

A QUICK GLANCE THROUGH any listings magazine will readily confirm that there's no shortage of medical TV dramas whatsoever. They're all over the shop, frankly. There is, however, one that all the others look up to, the one which over the last seven years has established itself as the most-watched TV drama in the world. And to maintain that status, year in, year out, with the inevitable cast departures and arrivals that go with any long-term endeavour, is no mean feat.

A cynic would argue, then, that the arrival of season eight of ER has a duty to pull something new out of the bag, to provide something fresh to keep the viewers hooked to the small screen. Call them wilfully perverse, but the ER producers have done exactly the opposite, and pulled (with all due respect to the actress and character) something old out of the bag. Yes, just three episodes into the new series, in a beautifully Brief Encounter-style scene, Dr Susan Lewis (Sherry Stringfield) makes her first return to the show since her surprise departure after the third season. Fans will never forget that scene, when Dr Lewis boarded a train to Arizona, leaving Mark Greene panting on the platform.

But before we get to renewing old acquaintances, there's all manner of loose ends from the last season still cluttering up the table: if Dr lewis thought this was going to be a comfortable back-in-the-saddle manoeuvre, she couldn't have been more wrong. There's Dr Greene (Anthony Edwards) coping with the triple-whammy of a new baby, the ongoing head-scan worries, and – as we saw in the chilling last frames of the last series – he's just effectively become a murderer.

Then there's Abby. After last series' career-high performance (coping with her bipolar mother, as played by Sally Field), she's now floating around on a relationship plateau that seems to offer access to both Luka Kovac (Goran Visnjic) and Carter (Noah Wyle), although that particular contest is settled soon enough. Oh, and what about Kerry Weaver (Laura Innes)? Last seen not so much 'coming out' as 'blurting out' to Dr 'Rocky' Romano (Paul McCrane), she returns to an Emergency Room convinced that the news of her sexual orientation will have spread like wildfire throughout the hospital. Wrongly, it transpires.

As McCrane says, and with no small amount of pride, 'It's excellent that we did that storyline. It wouldn't work on all shows,' he's quick to add, 'but on ER we have the calibre of writers who can do justice to this.'

McCrane's respect for the creative team behind the show is shared by the rest of the cast. Eriq LaSalle (Dr Benton), for his part, is looking forward to yet another layer of his seemingly impenetrable character being peeled off, and if it's been a lengthy process, he has no problem with that. 'It's a deliberately slow process,' he insists. 'Even now, we're still throwing a lot more at Benton, and this year sees him being seriously challenged. We're seeing more of the man than the professional.' That much is clear in the second episode of the new series, when Benton faces a family crisis and the dynamic between himself and their son is explored with ER's characteristic blend of hyper-realism and shameless emotional manipulation.

And it's in those scenes that you see just what makes ER exceptional. The drama lives and dies on the strength of the characters, not the scale of the mayhem that surrounds them. It's more about emotional wreckage than road-traffic accidents, and we find ourselves, year after year, actually caring about these made-up people, and the situations they have to contend with. As McCrane confirms, 'It's all make-believe,' he insists, 'so let's not take ourselves too seriously, but if there's an issue involved, yes, it does affect us. We had an episode last season that covered premature birth, and that was hard for me as a new father. My wife actually left the room when it aired.'

And this season? More issues, more heartbreak, and yes, the return of the much-missed 'ER voice of reason', Dr Susan Lewis. Sherry Stringfield has already, and quite unfairly, been labelled the 'ER David Caruso', which neatly overlooks the fact that Caruso left NYPD Blue to further his career, while Sherry simply wanted to opt out of celebrity and spend more time with her boyfriend. Ironically, she married another man, Larry Joseph (the couple had a baby daughter last March), but is now back on board as a regular.

Although as one returns, we brace ourselves for more departures and more 'downscaling' in the ever-fluid cast-list of the show. It's no secret that Anthony Edwards will be leaving, and that other cast-members are increasingly moving towards contracts that allow them the free time to explore other possibilities, as the rundown on the right shows. What hasn't changed, though, is the sheer class of the production. It's hard to talk of 'classic episodes' with ER, when so many of them warrant the label, but the new series, we can safely guarantee, will remain – and rightly so – The Most Watched TV Drama In the World.

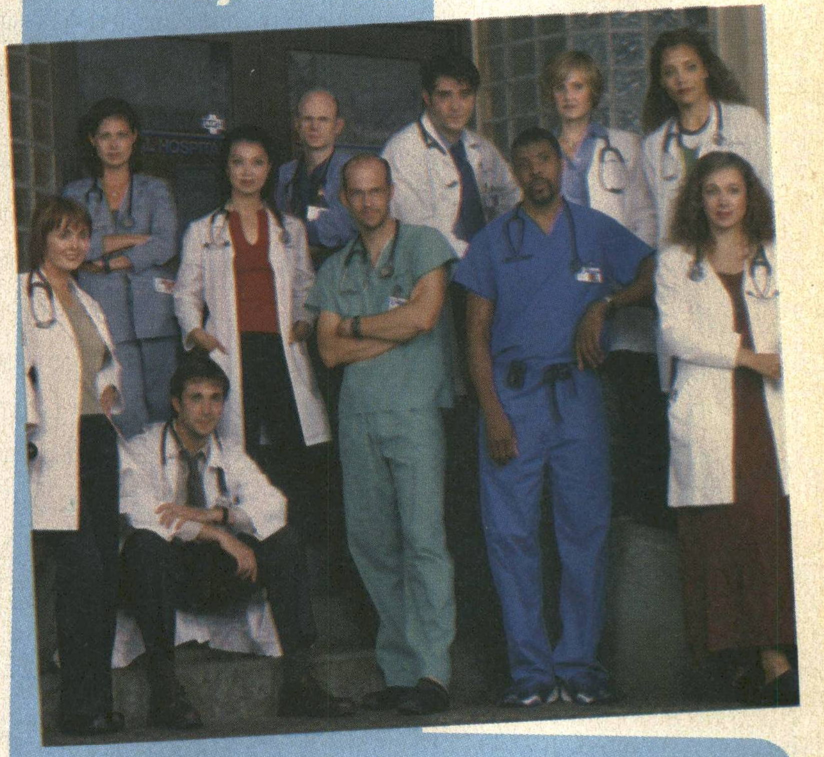
Life beyond ER



David Spedding wonders what the current and ex-stars are up to when they're not saving lives

GEORGE CLOONEY ✚ (DR DOUG ROSS)
The ultimate golden-boy success-story. George Clooney quickly lost that bouffant hair nonsense and established himself as perfect Leading Man material. Destined for big things, but never too big to make the occasional return cameo appearance in ER. Now a movie-star proper.

LAURA INNES (LEFT) ✚ (DR KERRY WEAVER)
Also finds time for acting in TV movies, but most notable as a director these days, with three Emmy nominations for her work helming episodes of ER and The West Wing.

NOAH WYLE ✚ (DR JOHN CARTER)
Noah, despite being cursed with the middle names 'Speer' and 'Strausser' has managed to get his finger into a few film pies already, with two releases scheduled for 2002 already, in the shape of White Oleander and Enough.

GORAN VISJNIC ✚ (DR LUKA KOVAC)
From movie (Welcome to Sarajevo) to pop promo (Madonna's The Power of Goodbye) to resident ER-hunk, and now looking forward to two movie releases in 2002, Dr Sleep and (in voice only) Ice Age.

ANTHONY EDWARDS (LEFT) ✚ (DR MARK GREENE)
Rivalling Noah Wyle in the 'silly middle name' stakes, Anthony Peter Planck Edwards has found time to produce four movies in the last three years and, just as importantly, strip to his leopardskin-print underpants for US comedy series Rock Story.

JULIANNA MARGULIES ✚ (NURSE CAROL HATHAWAY)
All Pre-Raphaelite curls and big dolly eyes, Margulies seems to have found her natural niche in the period drama side of things, starring in a female-led rewrite of Arthurian Legend (The Mists of Avalon), with two movies to come in 2002, Evelyn and Ghost Ship.

CAPTAIN FANTASTIC

After spending a few seasons hopping back and forth in time, former Quantum Leap star Scott Bakula is now setting off on a mission to explore the final frontier. Interview: Joe Nazzaro

continued overleaf ⇨

Starship troopers: Captain Archer (Scott Bakula) and his crew members in action in the Star Trek prequel, Enterprise

Taking place 150 years in the future, a century before the adventures of Captain James T Kirk and Mr Spock, the latest chapter in the Star Trek saga, Enterprise, is a stripped-down version of their universe. There are no photon torpedoes or phasers, and space is still a pretty scary place, full of dangerous alien races. Enter Captain Jonathan Archer (played by Scott Bakula), whose ship, Enterprise NX-01, is ready to boldly go where no man has gone before.

'Jonathan Archer is basically a Starfleet brat who's fulfilling the lifelong dream of being a starship captain'

'Jonathan Archer is basically a Starfleet brat who's fulfilling the lifelong dream of being a starship captain,' says Bakula of his character. 'He's a large part of the space programme, and the first captain to see what's beyond the moon and decide how to act when he sees ships without any signs of life. The show also exhibits a very human relationship between the captain and his officers. There's a strong mixture of excitement and fear that invokes memories of the loyal relationship Kirk and Spock had in the original series.'

Having already worked on Quantum Leap, the actor wasn't terribly anxious to get involved with another potentially long-running sci-fi series. That was until the producers of Enterprise painted him a very clear picture of what the concept and his character were all about.

'That doesn't always happen in series television,' he insists. 'I'm often told, "Oh, your character will be this and this," and then when I actually read through the script the character is just not there and I'm forced to find him. In the case of this show, however, they've done a good job of making the character dynamic, interesting and with plenty of room to grow.'

It also didn't hurt that Bakula was a closet Trekkie himself, having watched countless repeats of the original Star Trek series during his college days. 'Besides the wonderful and humorous relationships between the characters, the Star Trek legacy possesses an optimistic and immensely appealing nature. This universe paints the picture of a future that's not about the end of the world. It's about getting things right and moving on. That's a nice approach to think about.'

With Enterprise set in a time around 100 years before the other Trek series, Captain Archer and his crew have to survive without many of the luxuries of 23rd-century living. 'We're limited by our warp capacity,' notes Bakula, referring to the speed that his ship can travel. 'For the past 50 years, we've been developing an engine in conjunction with the Vulcans. We're finally able to reach warp speed, which will allow us to travel [in space]. The NX-01 doesn't work too well as it has a submarine feel. The crew of about 70 people bump their heads on things very easily. It doesn't feel cramped, but it's definitely smaller than the other Enterprises. Archer and his crew are not really supposed to be venturing out into space, so they're entering the unknown. We also have a slight mundane element: there's a squeak in the floor of Archer's cabin, it bugs the hell out of him!'

By all accounts, this back-to-basics approach has proven to be a hit with the fans. When Broken Bow, the two-hour premiere episode, was broadcast Stateside back in September, it shattered most of the viewing-figure records for Paramount's UPN Network. Not bad for a TV franchise that's now over 35 years old.

As for Bakula, taking command of the Enterprise has turned out to be a worthwhile decision for the veteran actor. 'I like the interaction between characters,' he says. 'Everybody is in this together, and it's wonderful to create that special group dynamic. Shows such as The West Wing or Law and Order revolve around a group of characters that are all working together despite their personal problems. Despite this show being set in space, the approach isn't too different. We're a solid crew and our daily common goal is to create magic. We want to give everything possible to each episode, get the show off to a great start and see where things take us.'

If Enterprise has a long and healthy life on TV, maybe Captain Archer will finally get that floor of his cabin fixed. In space, no one should have to hear you squeak.

Kim possible

Kim Cattrall almost turned down the role of Sex and the City's lusty man-eater that has made her a household name. Interview: Tina Ogle

PLAYING LUSTY, SEX-OBSESSED Samantha Jones in Sex and the City, showing from series one on Paramount Comedy Channel this month, has utterly changed Kim Cattrall's life. The 45-year-old actress, who positively insists that you mention her age, couldn't be happier. But when she was first offered the part, Cattrall turned it down several times and another actress had been cast before she changed her mind.

'They sent me the script early on and I passed on it. I'd recently done a series where I played a really unhappy, frustrated woman and I just didn't know whether I wanted to play Sam for a long period of time.'

The producers offered again once Sarah Jessica Parker had signed up, but Cattrall still wasn't convinced. It was only when a casting director friend called and insisted that this part had her name on it that she caved in. 'Sometimes I'm more frightened of success than I am of failure and I think that was part of it,' says the surprisingly soft-spoken actress.

The job meant relocating from Los Angeles to New York, another move that Cattrall wasn't sure she wanted to make. But shortly

continued overleaf ⇨

'There's an episode when the four of us, dressed in black, go to Connecticut for a baby shower, and that was the point where I thought we were really cooking'

after decamping to the East Coast, she met her now husband Mark Levinson in a jazz club. He makes amplifiers, is 'quite well-known' in America and Cattrall can't keep the contented smile from her face when his name is mentioned.

'One of my tips for meeting men is not to be afraid to go out alone. I think if I'd been with a gaggle of girls he wouldn't have come and spoken to me. He's very sweet and a little shy. I wasn't intending to meet anyone that night, I wasn't dolled up, I was relaxed and I was me. I guess that's the way to do it.'

Levinson didn't recognise Cattrall – she confesses that he only watches the news – but it's perhaps just as well. She finds that being known as America's scariest man-eater has changed the way men relate to her: 'Since playing Samantha most men seem to be really frightened. I think it seems to them that I'm uncontrollable. Only the brave need apply.'

Her fan mail, however, is extensive and usually consists of men standing next to their cars. 'God knows what that's all about.'

British fans may be surprised to learn that Cattrall was born in Liverpool, she, her siblings and mother following her emigrant father to Canada when she was only a few months old. She came back to visit in her teens and professes a great fondness for the city of her birth.

'There is that great sense of humour that was part of my childhood. There weren't a lot of niceties. If you look at it from a different perspective it's almost abusive but there was always so much love.'

Her early childhood was a hard one, with her parents moving from place to place in Canada in search of work. 'We moved around in an old van, my mom stopping at gas stations to change nappies. Sometimes the life I'm living now seems like a dream. I'm certainly aware of how lucky I am.'

She decided she wanted to act at the age of 10 and at 16 moved to New York on her own to take up a course at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

Her breakthrough role was as a gym teacher in Porky's and she was also a cadet in Police Academy. Small roles in many decent movies followed and she also did a lot of serious theatre.

But she began to worry in her mid-30s when Hollywood roles were restricted to 'Someone's wife or stepmom with one or two scenes that are not relevant to the main character. If that had been my destiny I think I would have supplemented it with something else or started producing.'

The smash success of Sex and the City, the show that has taken fairly outrageous issues and brought them into the public domain, was thus timely. But she will say that she still wasn't sure until half way through the first series.

'For me, it doesn't really click until then. There's an episode when the four of us, dressed in black, go to Connecticut for a baby shower, and that was the point where I thought we were really cooking.'

But surely the broad sexual antics and nudity of her character have embarrassed her? 'The only time I ever think anything has gone too far is when it isn't rooted in any kind of truth. If the reality is there, then I think you can do pretty much anything.'

Indeed her favourite episode is the 'Saggy Butt' episode, in which Samantha is dating a much older, vastly wealthy man but cannot get past the wrinkles on his bottom.

'Women knew these things but it was never aired outside that female circle, that's why I like the show,' she says.

'And what Sam says about being a woman and freedom of choice is very empowering. She is very brave.' cg

Welcome to Hollyweird

Tinseltown's weird and wacky inhabitants come under the spotlight for a new ITV2 series, Hollywood 2002. Nick Griffiths talks to some of the show's stars

JUNE FAIRCHILD IS WRITING her life story. She says it will be 'very juicy' and she isn't exaggerating. There's a mere taster in Hollywood Fame, the first of 15 Tinseltown exposés in the series Hollywood 2002 on ITV2.

Fairchild's story goes like this: she is born in California in 1946, and becomes an actress. While filming her first movie, 1968's Where Angels Go, Trouble Follows, the star Rosalind Russell tells her, 'You are going to go far in this business'.

Fairchild makes a dozen films in 10 years, working alongside the likes of Clint Eastwood (Thunderbolt and Lightfoot), Mae West (Sextette) and Rock Hudson (Pretty Maids All in a Row). She leaves Hollywood ('It was time to go, I couldn't stand it'), marries and has a baby at 39. Her husband becomes abusive; she divorces, then remarries.

Her new husband 'drank so much after his mother died, I had to leave him'. Given her own drink problem, she moves into a rescue mission and rehab. People on the streets recognise her as the Ajax Lady from Cheech and Chong's Up in Smoke, her last movie, from 1978.

Last February, the Los Angeles Times runs a story on her plight. That same day, she is arrested and sentenced to three months in jail for an earlier parole violation.

Now free, reformed and with a telesales job, she craves a return to acting. June Fairchild is making a comeback.

Gossip columnist Ted Casablanca says in Hollywood 2002 that he initially thought 'most people in the town wanted to act. I soon found out that was not the case. Everybody in Hollywood wants to be an actor.'

The documentary opens with wannabe Marc Fearney, a waiter by day who sits in a glass display case at night, dancing while sitting down. 'I just want to get my face out there,' he says. Certainly, people stare.

Later programmes in the series will focus on lookalikes, plastic surgery, dating, weddings, vice, the fans and the sex industry. Meanwhile, in the opener, concerning fame, we meet Susan Hale, who bought a pot-bellied pig named Pickles and wrote a movie for it: The Piggy Bank Robber. Then she drove for five days to Hollywood, with plans to turn Pickles into a star. 'Why not?' says Stephen Silverman, author of Movie Mutts, Hollywood Goes to the Dogs. 'Take your pig and head west. People do it every day.'

Only in Hollywood. Everyone knows the reputation: the facade of glamour, the backstabbing, the corporate machine and the reek of desperation. It's the only place in the world where 'Have a nice day' means 'Hi! My name is Tommy. I sing, dance and play the castanets. Please employ me.'

'If you would sell your mother to get famous, people like that,' says Casablanca – and if you think that's a crazy name, the assistant talent coordinator of the LA Improv Club, which also features in the documentary, is one Wingate Destiny.

June Fairchild says she went into the movies to make people happy. Did she also want fame? 'I guess you could say that. I always had that in my heart, to be a star. To get an Oscar would be nice.'

Dreams of this comeback kept her going on the streets. It's her destiny, she says. Still, in the fickle world of showbusiness, it will be hard.

June is waiting for a new story to appear in the Los Angeles Times, which she plans to mail out with her résumé to agents. It's about her attending the premiere of Legally Blonde – designer dress, limousine and the walk along the red carpet.

'I felt terrible because no one knew who the heck I was,' she admits. 'But it was badly planned. I turned up right between the main stars, so I was on the carpet between them. It was very lonely and cold. I waved at the photographers and they're not even taking pictures of me.'

Hollywood has the memory of a goldfish and a pathological resistance to taking risks. One can only wish her luck. If Fairchild makes it again, 'I'll do it till I die,' she says. 'I'll die on camera. I don't care. I'll go all the way.' cg

Vicki
Butler-Henderson

Rugged 4x4 vehicles are designed to handle the most hostile off-road conditions. But often the toughest challenge these motors face is the morning school run

IN SOME RESPECTS I know the real value of off-road vehicles, being a farmer's daughter. The first vehicle I drove was, in fact, the king of all 4x4s – a whopping great tractor.

They are wonderful vehicles – drive one into a heavily ploughed field and it won't miss a wheel rotation. Nothing seems too tough for them – when was the last time you saw one being towed out of a sticky situation? Exactly.

But I'm also terribly fond of their road-going offspring, despite the fact they are many times removed in the family tree.

Yes, off-roaders for the masses have become a massive market. There's one to suit all budgets and sizes, from £10,000 for Suzuki's cute 1.3-litre Jimny, to Mercedes-Benz's ML 55 AMG – a snip at around £51,000.

As everyone now knows, these 4x4s – and everything in between – will be steered well clear of anything resembling a piece of grass, let alone a ploughed field, so their main selling point is their image.

They manage to portray a 'lifestyle' that tells the neighbours what a high-adrenalin, action-packed, outdoor life you lead.

'Yep, I'm out there, living it large.'

But more often than not, the reality is the opposite.

'Erm, yes, well, I take the kids to school in it, can't find a parking space big enough, block the road outside the school gates and cause a right old tailback.'

Mmm, some lifestyle.

The life of the off-roader has travelled a fair way to get to this 'fashionable' stage. Land Rover has to be the most famous 4x4 name and its current Defender model will take you the furthest away from a strip of Tarmac. At the other end of the scale is the BMW X5. I am a huge fan of this car, primarily because I drove it round a racing circuit and it out-handled many a smaller, sportier car. It's equipped to the gills with creature comforts that would rival the QE2's, and it has the cachet to make Mrs Jones twitch her curtains in envy.

However, I have neglected to mention anything about its off-road capabilities – which is indicative of the modern role cars of this class face. But rest assured on this point, because the X5 will trample a respectable amount of turf if called upon to do so.

However, for me, the pinnacle of mud-plugging vehicles that remains a cut-above, and gives you all the one-upmanship you could possibly wish for, will always be a tractor.

Imagine the stir that would cause rocking down London's King's Road. ✪

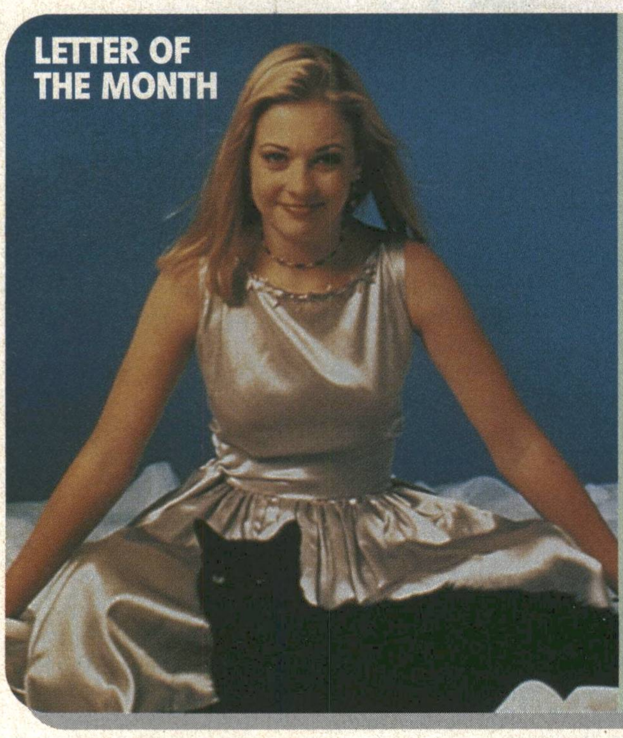
LETTER OF THE MONTH



The where witch project

Please could you verify exactly where Sabrina the Teenage Witch is set? She is saying constantly she lives in New England and always driving to Boston. However, someone tells me Westbridge is in California. So, what's going on? Where is her aunts' house, exactly?
Maxine Santanna, Sheffield

Congratulations, Maxine, you've won £50! Sabrina the Teenage Witch (whose Melissa Joan Hart is pictured) is filmed in Burbank, California, where there is indeed a Westbridge. But the series is set in Boston (the ZIP code for Sabrina's fictional town of Westbridge, Massachusetts, is 01970, the same ZIP code for Salem, Massachusetts – the 'Witch City'). You can catch Sabrina on Nickelodeon, and see series six later in the year.

10TH KINGDOM COME

When The 10th Kingdom was first screened in 2000 on Sky One, my sisters and I thought it was fantastic. When it was screened again in March of this year, we didn't hesitate to video the entire series, and since then I have read the book many times. I want to know if there is going to be a sequel and if there is, will Sky One screen it? I have heard many rumours that there will be a second series, and I was curious to know if they were true.
Lillian Evans, e-mail

Sky One informs us that there are no current plans to air a second series of The 10th Kingdom. But the first series will be shown again from Monday 24 December to Friday 4 January, every weekday at 4.00pm.

STARGATE GAZING

I am a very dedicated Stargate SG-1 fan and I enjoy watching the old episodes on Sky One. On 24 November, Channel 4 showed an episode called Jolinar's Memories. I've looked through Sky One listings and found no sign of this episode, so I was wondering, has Sky One missed out the whole of this series or has it just aired any episodes it wanted to? I think that if Sky One plans to show the old series then all of the episodes should be shown.
Dave D, Newcastle

A Sky One spokesperson replies: 'It's likely that we will indeed play the third series, including Jolinar's Memories, later on in the spring, so stay tuned for more information.'

WAYAN'S WONDERFUL SHOW

I loved LivingTV's My Wife and Kids and I would like to know if they are planning to show the next season or repeat the last, as the Wayans brothers' productions are great and I would like to see more!
Keri Combs, e-mail

LivingTV tells us there are no current plans to show a new series of My Wife and Kids, Keri. However, you can see the first series again this month on Trouble, weekdays from Monday 7th.

'I loved LivingTV's My Wife and Kids. The Wayans brothers' productions are great and I would like to see more!'

ONCE, AND ONCE ONLY

Could you tell me if Sky One will be showing the second series of Once and Again this year? I love the show and I have been looking on the web at their official homepage of the programme. They are now into the third series, and we have only seen series one.
Elaine Penswick, e-mail

Many readers have asked the same question, Elaine, but Sky One currently has no plans to air further series of Once and Again.

JUST CAN'T GET ENOUGH

I would just like to say a big thank you to Sky One for showing Tough Enough. It made my mum and dad look at wrestling in a whole different light! Please can you tell me if Sky One will be showing it again at any time soon?
Robert Wigston, e-mail

Sure enough, Robert, Sky One will be showing Tough Enough again, Tuesdays to Thursdays at 12noon, from 26 December.

NAME THAT TOON

First let me say how great Cartoon Network's Toonami slot is – I never miss it! However, my reason for writing is that I wonder who the artist of the music is behind the Toonami ad. The piece of music is several minutes long and I wonder if you can tell me what it is called and if it's available to buy anywhere.
Max Hannan, e-mail

Cartoon Network tells us that this piece of music was composed especially for the series, but unfortunately the Toonami CD is only available to buy in the US at present. Try visiting an online book or audio store

CHILDREN'S TV NEEDS TRANSFORMING

I am writing in response to the terrible children's programmes that are shown on Sky One at the weekends. We are forced to watch the likes of Pokémon, Max Steel and Mummies Alive. What has happened to the superb weekend programme The Fun Factory? I remember when I'd get up at 6.00am and watch it until 12.00pm. But what I find completely shocking is that no channel shows the Transformers anymore. It was an excellent programme, which is still highly enjoyed, and I'd love it if Sky One returned it to our screens. I am aware that Beast Wars is being aired, but it isn't the traditional cartoon, which accompanied us all through our younger years. And programmes such as Jason's Wheeled Warriors, The Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles and The GoBots are still missed today.
Steven Booth, e-mail

Sky One replies: 'Sky One always welcomes viewers' comments and we are sorry to hear that you do not enjoy the children's programming, although the kids' shows do have a huge following. Unfortunately, there are currently no plans to air Transformers, Jason's Wheeled Warriors, Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles or The GoBots on Sky One, but we do hope you stay tuned for further news on new children's programmes.'

CATCHING KURT AND COURTNEY

I would just like to say a big thank you to UK Horizons for showing the Kurt and Courtney documentary [Nick Broomfield's film investigating the death of Nirvana's Kurt Cobain, and looking at his relationship with Courtney Love]. I missed it when it was originally shown on the BBC and found it extremely interesting and informative.

I would like to know if UK Horizons has any plans to show this documentary again. If not, is there any way I might be able to get a recording of it as I would like to have it to keep.
John Giles, e-mail

Unfortunately, John, UK Horizons was unable to tell us if Kurt and Courtney will be shown on the channel again. However, Kurt and Courtney is currently available to own on video, so try asking about it at your nearest large retailer. If you have internet access, it's also on sale online. You can log on to www.amazon.co.uk for details.

MUSIC, MAESTRO PLEASE

I was thrilled when Millennium returned to our screens with a brand new series on Sc-Fi. Although I have one major problem – I really want to buy the theme tune to the series, but cannot find it anywhere. Could you please, please let me know where I can buy the theme tune by Mark Snow. I just love the music, as well as the unforgettable performance by Mr Lance Henriksen.
P Simmonds, West Sussex

Mark Snow, the man behind the Millennium and X-Files soundtracks, is a prolific composer. Although there doesn't appear to be a soundtrack of music from Millennium available at present, Mark's music has been released on CD. The Snow Files: Film Music of Mark Snow and The Truth and the Light: Music from the X-Files are both currently available at www.amazon.co.uk Try asking for these at your nearest large music outlet. You can contact the makers of Millennium by logging on to www.foxworld.com.

EDITOR'S NOTE

January is traditionally a time of new beginnings, and this month's Cable Guide is no different …

Check out the all-new Star Trek prequel Enterprise; pre-Kirk captain Scott Bacula talks about exploring that final frontier on pages 13, 14. Buffy makes a miraculous return from beyond the grave for a new round of vampire slaying (pages 6, 7). And there are arrivals – and departures – ahead for the docs on the box in ER's eighth season. Find out more on pages 10, 11.

Feeling worse for wear after all that Christmas spirit? Fighting Fit, Discovery's new series, takes a dual approach to training. Fitter-than-fit host Matthew Pinsent fills us in (page 9) – so now there's no excuse … Happy new year!

Neutron bomb

Meet Jimmy Neutron, the boy genius with a talent for creating scientific gadgets and havoc wherever he goes ➔ Jimmy Neutron is a typical kid – he has homework, chores and parents to deal with – but the similarities end there, because Jimmy is a genius, who can create amazing gadgets, like Goddard, his robotic dog, a barking Swiss Army knife of a pet.

Living in Retroville, a small American suburb that is stuck in the 1950s but is also futuristic, Jimmy is the smartest kid in school and with his friends in tow you can expect riotous adventures.

The film Jimmy Neutron: Boy Genius is set to screen in March, and a spin-off series will air later this year on Nickelodeon. In the meantime, Nickelodeon whets your appetite this month with a series of Jimmy Neutron shorts.

Steve Oedekerk, the writer of The Nutty Professor, Patch Adams and Ace Ventura: When Nature Calls, co-wrote and produced the Jimmy Neutron film and also helped write the series. 'I figured a boy genius would be a great role-playing fantasy character,' says Steve, admitting that he'd loved to have been a boy genius himself and if he had, the first thing he would have invented would be trousers with a never-ending sweet supply in their pockets. 'As it turns out, when I was a kid I was all the mischief without the genius,' he declares.

Ah well, at least Steve can console himself with Jimmy and his abilities to do amazing things, such as fly to school, using his jet-propelled backpack, or make himself invisible, using his super-fast shoes.

So, what can you expect Jimmy to get up to when he lands on your screen? According to Steve, you'll see 'just your normal every day kid's stuff.' Well, that's if you call trips to outer space, time travel, five Jimmy clones, smart trousers that put themselves away but then get too smart and try to take over the world, and a gigantic plant monster of a teacher, normal! cg

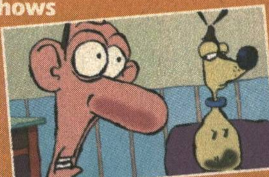
AIR SPACE

Whether it's down to an overdose of sci-fi shows or the dawning of a new year, 2002 gets off to an out-of-this-world start with two new space-age shows



➔ Alien antics

How would you feel if you had to uproot and move to another planet? That's the scenario facing the Martin family in Spaced Out, after dad George lands the job of manager of Krach Industries' secret orbital space station.

But while George's wife Monica and son Benjamin daydream about meeting intelligent aliens, Betty, George's teenage daughter, can't wait for the day she can return to Earth.

Family strains aside, Krach Industries have been more than a little astro-economical with the truth – they've neglected to say that the real reason the Martins are aboard the space station is to discover whether life can be sustained in space. In short, the Martins are unwitting guinea pigs.

Add a few bizarre characters to the air space, like Boris the Russian cosmonaut and Guy, the one-man service industry (waiter, doctor and gardener!), plus a handful of aliens, and androids, and there's bound to be some seriously way-out plots.

Spaced Out, Cartoon Network, daily from 7th, 6.30pm

➔ Space invader

A little green alien, an under-aged paranormal investigator and an annoying little sister are the perfect ingredients for Invader Zim.

Zim, a little green creature from outer space, is on a mission from the planet Irk to gather information about Earthling weaknesses, so that his people can conquer Earth hassle-free. Zim knows zilch about Earth, but he's determined to impress his leaders.

Disguising himself as a human child and attending an elementary school, Zim goes about his business unnoticed, but his classmate Dib, an obsessed paranormal investigator, is on to him. Unfortunately, Dib's little sister, Gaz, is set on embarrassing the rivals.

With Zim spying on Earth, Dib trying to expose him as an alien and Gaz interfering, you can expect weird sci-fi happenings of cosmic proportions.

Invader Zim, Nickelodeon, weekends from 12th, 8.00am cg

Meet the Prouds

Disney Channel proudly presents The Proud Family. Interview: Tina Ogle

It's been called the black version of The Simpsons, but new animated sitcom The Proud Family, which will appeal to adults and tweenies alike, has a sassy personality all of its own thanks to its star, rebellious 14-year-old Penny Proud.

The goal of its creator, Bruce Smith, was simple: 'As much as I loved The Flintstones when I was growing up, there was never going to be a black character come walking into Bedrock. I wanted to create that reality.'

The result is a mix of the domestic and the fantastical, with solid central family characters joined by a host of eccentrics. The greatest of the latter is Suga Mama, the straight-talking grandma. For actress Jo Marie Payton, who voices the exuberant elder, it was a joyous role: 'When I first saw Suga Mama I thought she was the cutest little fat thing I had ever seen. She looked like a black Moses. She's sweet and she's tough. When she doesn't like a thing, you're gonna know she doesn't like it, but on the other side she's gonna say, "Come over here and give me some s-u-g-a-r".'

While the show freely combines African-American, Latino and white characters, its primary aim is to entertain rather than make a statement. Smith says: 'I'll poke fun at anyone at any time. I'm not looking to be politically correct; I'd just like the project as a whole to create a balance of the human world. And I'm proud to say The Proud Family really does.' cg

A CRUEL TWIST

Trouble's mean-but-fun reality TV show Cruel Summer is back with an icy edge

Cruel Summer fans will be delighted to know that the show is back this month with Cruel Winter.

Hosted once again by cheeky lass Sarah Cawood, it's the show where friends and family, fed up with their nearest and dearest's bad habits, nominate the culprits and the worst offenders are then sent to a secret location to reform within four weeks.

Cruel Summer saw part-time barman Dean Hamshaw nominated by best friend Chris for his womanising ways, and he ended up bagging the top prize of £10,000, plus two round-the-world tickets.

Dirty Dean, as he's best known to viewers, admits his time as a Boy Scout was a huge advantage when it came to the challenges. 'I was just doing stuff that I had done for years.'

In fact, the West Sussex lad loved the challenges so much that he didn't mind losing them, particularly as he was with new-found friends: 'Everyone got on like a house on fire,' he says. 'It wasn't until the last week that tempers were a bit frayed.'

But the 23-year-old is the first to admit that it wasn't all fun and games, especially when he had to swim in a freezing cold loch. 'When I got out I just thought: "Why am I doing this?"'

The big question is: did Dean feel reformed? 'Definitely not – I felt the exact opposite, having been starved of girls.' cg

CAST AWAY

THE ADVENTURES OF ROCKY AND BULLWINKLE U

RENE RUSSO, ROBERT DE NIRO

88 MINS

Fiendish De Niro's agents Natasha Fatale and Boris Badenov attempt to take over the world, but are foiled by animated heroes, flying squirrel Rocky and dim-bulb moose Bullwinkle. Like George of the Jungle and Dudley Do-Right, this wheeze is adapted (with some anarchic comic panache) from Jay Ward's US 1960s TV cartoon comedy. It's hauled in with aplomb by respected stage director Des McAnuff.

BEAUTIFUL CREATURES 18

RACHEL WEISZ, SUSAN LYNCH

85 MINS PREMIERE

Abused girlfriends of criminals, Petula (Weisz) and Dorothy (Lynch) meet when they accidentally kill Petula's man. As Scotland's comedy-thriller answer to Thelma & Louise, they go on the lam with the loot, pursued by gangsters and Dorothy's brute Iain Glen.

BLESS THE CHILD 15

KIM BASINGER, JIMMY SMITS

104 MINS PREMIERE

This millennial religious thriller has Basinger raising her strangely gifted, angelic orphaned niece when they become the hounded prey of a powerful, sinister cult led by evil Rufus Sewell. Demons, assassins, mysterious strangers and FBI man Smits join the fray.

CAST AWAY 12

TOM HANKS, HELEN HUNT

138 MINS PREMIERE

Likable, watchable and moving, Tom Hanks deserves his usual raves for a thoroughly absorbing, tour de force performance (reuniting him with his Forrest Gump director Robert Zemeckis) as Federal Express man Chuck Noland, who goes down with his plane and parcels on an uninhabited tropical isle that is far from a paradise. No musical favourites, luxuries or books for our man as he, a brainy urban guy who's a complete novice in the unwelcoming outdoors, courageously struggles to survive, find water, catch food, make fire and keep a tenuous grip on his sanity (just barely) by bonding with a volleyball he calls Wilson (to the joy of its brand manufacturers). Helen Hunt is the woman he left behind, but the events on the mainland that bookend his drastic, life-changing experience are less satisfying than the funny and frightening solitary ordeal of a modern man marooned.

CHARLIE'S ANGELS 15

DREW BARRYMORE, CAMERON DIAZ, LUCY LIU

95 MINS PREMIERE

Once upon a time there were three little girls ... TV's top trio of female crimebusters graduate to film with a whopping $90m budget for superbabe stars, spectacular action sequences, funny disguises and droll Bill Murray as their cuddly minder, Bosley. The Angels (on behalf of mysterious boss Charlie, voiced by the original man himself, John Forsythe) are assigned to rescue a kidnapped genius. All, of course, is not what it seems, but the espionage plot is secondary to Austin Powers style self-parody and some sensational stunt work by the gutsy gals. None of these three – Diaz as daffy Natalie, Barrymore as fearless Dylan, and Liu as cool, kickboxing Alex – has hair as great as Farrah's definitive Seventies 'do, but they're game on for slapstick physical comedy, frantic fight scenes and the all-essential skimpy costumes.

HELD UP PG

JAMIE FOXX, NIA LONG

85 MINS PREMIERE

The bungling robbers in this goofy hostage comedy regret their capture of the customers in a small town convenience store. Motor-mouth Foxx, anxious to locate his fiancée, decides to resolve the siege crisis between the idiots inside and outside.

MAD ABOUT MAMBO 12

KERI RUSSELL, WILLIAM ASH

89 MINS PREMIERE

It's Strictly Ballroom in Belfast, with dance, romance and comedy to a samba beat as Catholic schoolboy Ash takes Latin dancing lessons to improve his footie skills. He falls for his snooty, rich, beautiful partner, and they help each other realise their dreams.

NUTTY PROFESSOR II: THE KLUMPS 12

EDDIE MURPHY, JANET JACKSON

103 MINS

Murphy fans get eight Eddies for the price of one in this crazy sequel to the misadventures of roly-poly Professor Sherman Klump. The shy, scientific genius's alter ego, Buddy Love, is on the loose again, vying for Sherman's fiancée.

PASSION OF MIND 12

DEMI MOORE, STELLAN SKARSGARD,

101 MINS

Dramatic version of the alternate reality dilemma, with Demi leading two lives – a businesswoman in New York and a widow in France – wrestling between lovers and life choices in a supernatural/psychological mystery she fears is either a dream or a split personality disorder.

BLESS THE CHILD

PITCH BLACK

VIN DIESEL, RADHA MITCHELL
104 MINS

This low-budget sci-fi horror thriller makes up for its modest resources and absence of stars with abundant ingenuity, inspiration and solidly believable performances from up-and-comers to watch, making it the finest fright of its kind in some years.

POKÉMON THE MOVIE 2000

PG

the voice of VERONICA TAYLOR
98 MINS PREMIERE

The further adventures of cheerful, courageous Pikachu, his cheeky young trainer Ash and all their pocket monster friends to tickle the small fry.

QUILLS

18

GEOFFREY RUSH, JOAQUIN PHOENIX, KATE WINSLET, MICHAEL CAINE
119 MINS PREMIERE

Based on the travails of one of the 18th century's most notorious figures, this colourful period drama both celebrates and deplores the unrestrained, arguably unhinged Marquis De Sade, whose scandalous writings not only provided the language with the word 'sadistic' but led to his incarceration in a mental asylum. Classy Geoffrey Rush heads a terrific cast and revels in his flamboyant role as the witty, perverse, aristocratic inmate whose rebellious lustiness has a tumultuous, ultimately tragic effect on those around him – including the compassionate and vulnerable buxom kitchen wench (Winslet), an upright priest (Phoenix) and the most malevolent doctor ever to torment a madman (Caine).

RED PLANET

VAL KILMER, TOM SIZEMORE, CARRIE-ANNE MOSS, TERENCE STAMP
103 MINS PREMIERE

In the not-too-distant future, antagonistic astronauts journey to Mars to gauge its viability for human colonisation, a mission with desperate urgency as Earth's breathable air is running out. Along with the inhospitable red landscape they have to contend with deadly weather, dwindling supplies, parasitic Martian killer bugs, malfunctioning robots and each other, although ice cool female captain Moss (from The Matrix) understandably finds herself thawing in the direction of bad ass Kilmer.

THE ROAD TO EL DORADO

U

the voices of KEVIN KLINE, KENNETH BRANAGH
86 MINS

A couple of 16th-century Spanish conmen stowaway with conquistadors and stumble onto the legendary City of Gold, where they are mistaken for gods. Animated fun.

SHAFT

SAMUEL L JACKSON
96 MINS

Sam Jackson is the man! Sporting black Armani and a mighty sexy, lean, mean 'tude, he's one cool dude as a maverick NYPD 'tec.

THE 6TH DAY

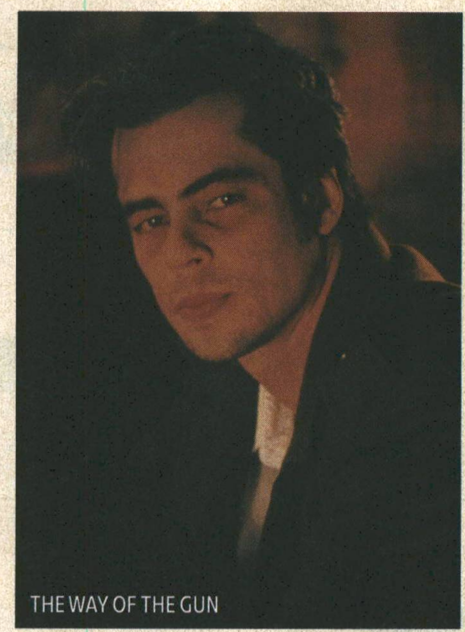
ARNOLD SCHWARZENEGGER, TONY GOLDWYN, ROBERT DUVALL
119 MINS

The Bible tells us God made man on the sixth day of creation, and man (in the shape of mad scientist Duvall and a far-reaching, evil corporate empire) is playing God in this sci-fi thriller, set in a not-too-distant future when cloning animals is common but cloning humans is supposedly outlawed. Family man Arnie (playing a character named Adam, to further the biblical references) comes home to find he's been replaced by a DNA double.



THE WAY OF THE GUN

SEXY BEAST

RAY WINSTONE, BEN KINGSLEY
85 MINS PREMIERE

Costa del Crime expat Winstone's tanning regime is interrupted by the unwelcome intrusion of psychotic gangster Kingsley (a brilliant heavy), there to press him into a last bank robbery in Blighty. An underwater heist is one of the stylish surprises in an unusual Brit gangster film.

THE SKULLS

JOSHUA JACKSON, PAUL WALKER
103 MINS PREMIERE

A poor boy at a prestigious university is invited into a select secret society (inspired by Yale's Skull and Bones, which has nurtured politicians, tycoons and spymasters for 200 years) and finds the temptations come with a deadly price in a thriller crossed with gothic horror.

SAFFRON BURROWS, SALMA HAYEK, XANDER BERKELEY, HOLLY HUNTER
94 MINS PREMIERE

Mike Figgis's experimental, improvisational drama divides the screen into four separate but simultaneous storylines shot in real time, as film industry types and troubled couples wittily and ominously cross paths. It's avant-garde but easier to follow than it sounds, and the attractive ensemble helps.

UNBREAKABLE

BRUCE WILLIS, SAMUEL L JACKSON
103 MINS

Bruce Willis re-teams with Sixth Sense writer-director M Night Shyamalan for another highly original, spooky thriller of suspense and the supernatural – and with his Die Hard with a Vengeance co-star, Jackson, in an extraordinary role. Willis is security guard David Dunn, with a shaky marriage (to Robin Wright), an adoring son (outstanding Spencer Treat Clark), and unbelievable luck. The sole survivor of a horrific train crash, he is disturbed and bewildered when approached by frail comic art collector Elijah (Jackson), who suffers from a rare brittle bone syndrome and has a lifelong obsession with superheroes. It's played with panache by the excellent cast and there are a host of haunting moments.

URBAN LEGENDS 2: FINAL CUT

JENNIFER MORRISON, HART BOCHNER
95 MINS PREMIERE

Death imitates art in a slasher movie-within-a-movie. Film student Amy's thesis work on modern myths of horror inspires a college campus psycho to carve up her fellow cineastes, who are all vying for their department's top prize – The Hitchcock. Everybody's a critic!

VERTICAL LIMIT

CHRIS O'DONNELL, ROBIN TUNNEY
120 MINS

Haunted by tragedy, retired climber-turned-photographer Peter (O'Donnell) must conquer his personal demons and everything nature can throw at him to save his stranded mountaineering sister Annie (Tunney) when her expedition meets with icy disaster on a Himalayan peak. An international cast playing daredevil climbers, indomitable Sherpas and the Pakistani army brave avalanches, highly volatile explosives and high-altitude action.

RYAN PHILLIPPE, BENICIO DEL TORO
115MINS PREMIERE

Two drifters abduct heavily pregnant Juliette Lewis for ransom from the wealthy couple whose baby she's carrying, but are pursued into Mexico by a philosophical gangster (James Caan) sent to get her back. Wild shoot-outs punctuate a darkly comic thriller from the writer of The Usual Suspects.

WHISPERS: AN ELEPHANT'S TALE

the voice of ANGELA BASSETT
70 MINS FR

This heart-warming family adventure, beautifully shot in Botswana, puts human voices to nature footage of real elephants for the tale of a lost baby elephant seeking both her mother and the elephant paradise with the help of older, wiser Groove (Bassett).

WOMAN ON TOP

PENELOPE CRUZ, HAROLD PERRINEAU JR
88 MINS PREMIERE

Mouth-watering Penelope Cruz is a broken-hearted Brazilian chef struggling with men, menus, her English and the love curse of an ancient sea god in this romantic trifle. Perrineau sizzles as his sympathetic transvestite flatmate.

ANGEL DELIGHT

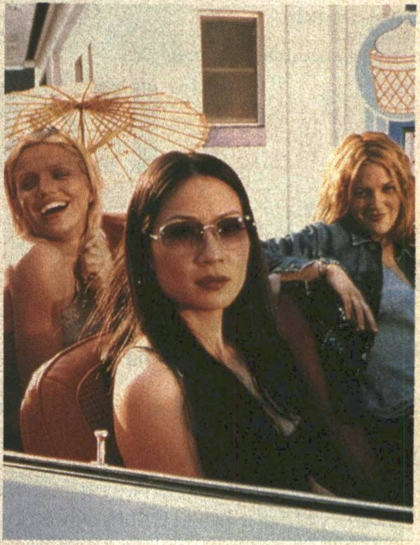
After taking television by storm in the hit series Ally McBeal, Lucy Liu has set her sights on the big screen. And her quest for movie stardom continues with Charlie's Angels. Interview: Lawrie Masterson

'It's wonderful because I feel as if I met some sisters on the film and that's really rare'



Photos: Julie Dennis Brothers/Corbis Oultine (UK), Movie Store

The arrival of Lucy Liu back on the Ally McBeal set from her lunch break is as typical as it is unconventional. Instead of riding in one of the golf-style buggies that shuttle people between sound stages at LA's vast Manhattan Beach Studios complex, she has hitched a lift with a crew member who brings his own bicycle to work.

Her raven hair and her skirt billowing as she balances precariously on the seat while her 'chauffeur' stands and pedals, Liu is soon deposited safely outside Stage 25. She calls a cheerful 'Thank you' back over her shoulder and scurries inside.

Then, as if to contradict that easy-going attitude, she insists with a wicked grin that she has become 'more difficult than ever' now the biggest movie of her career, Charlie's Angels, is a certified blockbuster.

Success on that level was obviously a catalyst in Liu's decision to negotiate out of her contract on Ally McBeal, in which she plays the unpredictable Ling Woo, and concentrate on movies. Her first big-screen appearance was in a small role in Jerry Maguire and her subsequent movie credits include Payback, with Mel Gibson, and Jackie Chan's Shanghai Noon.

Officially, Liu and Ally McBeal creator David E Kelley reached an amicable agreement about her departure, although America's gossip columnists insist otherwise. In any event, she will be seen in only four or five episodes of the fifth series and her departure becomes part of a major shift for the Golden Globe and Emmy Award-winning show, which stars Calista Flockhart as an eccentric Boston lawyer.

With Robert Downey Jr also gone after his recent brushes with the authorities, Kelley has signed actresses Regina Hall, who appeared in three episodes of the previous season, and Julianne Nicholson (whose credits include Passion of Mind opposite Demi Moore), plus X-Men star James Marsden.

Since Charlie's Angels, Liu has made Hotel for British director Mike Figgis, Company Man, with Jeremy Northam, and has a part in Quentin Tarantino's forthcoming film, Kill Bill.

Surprisingly, then, the 33-year-old American-Chinese actress discounts somewhat the power of the movies, as opposed to television. She recalls that prior to Charlie's Angels, while making Play It to the Bone, she went into a gift shop with her co-stars Antonio Banderas, Woody Harrelson and Lolita Davidovich and was the only one recognised.

'It was like, "Wait a minute, lady… hell-ooo,"' Liu says. 'It was amazing because they don't see those people every week like they see us. That's what is astonishing about television.'

In Charlie's Angels she plays Alex, alongside Cameron Diaz's Natalie and Drew Barrymore's Dylan, with veteran comic actor Bill Murray as the Angels' boss, Bosley. Liu laughs off rumours of in-fighting between the three co-stars, said to have marred the production.

'Since the press was locked out, there were a lot of rumours that started,' she says. 'It's wonderful because I feel as if I met some sisters on the film and that's really rare. Sometimes you meet people and you like them, but you never feel that kind of intense connection with them, you know?

'I feel really strongly about the movie,' she adds. 'I'm very critical of my own work, but I support this movie all the way.'

While Liu says the updated Angels are nothing like the women in the kitsch 1970s television series with the dream line-up of Kate Jackson, Farrah Fawcett and Jaclyn Smith, parts of the film do pay homage to the old TV show. 'But we're in no way trying to imitate their characters and I think they appreciate that,' she says.

'Kate Jackson was on Ally as a guest star and I actually talked to her, but we never had an opportunity to meet the others.'

Like it or not, with her burgeoning acting career and a high-profile commercial deal with a cosmetics company, Liu has the added pressure of being seen as a role model by America's Asian community.

'It does put me on a pedestal, which is not the most comfortable place to be,' says the New York-born daughter of Chinese immigrants. 'But I think in general it opens doors, because people come up to me and say, "We're so grateful that you're on television. It really helps us". I'm proud to be part of that.

'But I have the feeling that if you do one thing wrong then it's "God forbid!" You're everyone's favourite until you step in the wrong direction, and everyone is waiting for you to step in the wrong direction and that's unfair.'

That wicked grin appears again and she adds: 'What if I go off and trash a hotel room? Listen, I had a bad night. Don't follow in my footsteps.'

All that JAZZ

Woody Allen's twin passions are movies and jazz. He recently combined the two to make the sublime fictional biopic Sweet and Lowdown. Interview: Lawrie Masterson

'THE ONLY THING STANDING between me and greatness,' muses Woody Allen, 'is me.' The writer, director, actor and accomplished clarinet player allows himself a wry smile at the thought, then adds: 'There's no excuse for me not being the greatest film-maker in the world because I can do whatever I want. I'm one of the few film-makers that has this great luck to be able to make a film tomorrow about any subject I like.'

And one subject he likes – no, make that loves with a passion – is jazz. Sweet and Lowdown is his homage to the legendary Belgian-born gypsy guitarist Django Reinhardt, who first came to prominence in the 1930s, and the film was, in Allen's own words, 'just a joy' to make.

'I probably have just about everything he ever recorded,' Allen says. 'I always say, with Louis Armstrong and Sidney Bechet, he is one of the three dominant jazz soloists from that era of music.

'He was the European musician who was, at the minimum, the equal to the greatest American jazz musicians. As soon as I heard him, and I was a teenager still, it was an astonishing experience for me and I became fascinated by him.'

Sean Penn, as the egocentric virtuoso Emmett Ray, and British actress Samantha Morton, as his downtrodden, mute girlfriend Hattie, earned Academy and Golden Globe Awards nominations for their roles in the movie, which also features the usual parade of stars who line up to appear in Allen's films – Uma Thurman, Anthony LaPaglia, Gretchen Mol and cult film-maker John Waters among them.

Allen appears only as himself, helping fill in anecdotal information about Ray. So do people such as noted jazz historian Nat Hentoff, thus brilliantly blurring the line between fact and fiction.

'It's a very, very typical way to hear about the lives of a great many musicians who played around the United States in the 1920s and 1930s,' Allen says. 'Just people recounting incidents, some of whom conflicted with one another, some of whom verified one another.

'It's very common in musical folklore for a jazz legend to be the focal point of a number of anecdotes, so that seemed a natural way to tell the story. It's a fictional movie, but I wanted the audience to regard Emmett Ray as a real person because I did my best to make him real in the character writing.'

Allen appears at ease both personally and professionally, having survived the relationship scandals that threatened to destroy him in the early 1990s. He even made a rare trip from his New York base to California for a full-scale Hollywood premiere of Sweet and Lowdown, bringing along his young wife Soon-Yi Previn ('It's a big treat for her to come to California ... so if she likes it that is also pleasurable for me').

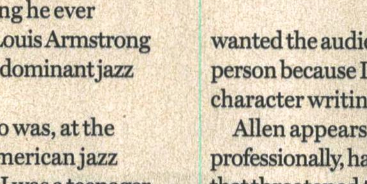
Advancing age depresses him, but he notes that, at 66, he is eligible for social security and, therefore, half-price admission to movies!

And he intends making plenty more himself, perhaps even a box-office blockbuster. 'I have not been one of those writers who is intimidated by a blank page,' he says. 'When I buy a packet of paper at a store, I feel like Picasso. I have many ideas. I would love to have a film reach a wide public, but I would never do anything to make that happen.

'I make the films that I want to make and I hope that one day I will get lucky and there will be a big audience.

'What's important is the work, not what some person thinks of it or how much money it makes or how much it doesn't make. Forget about that.

'I've had some hits bigger than others and as long as there's enough of an audience all over the world so that nobody gets hurt too much financially, then I'm able to function. And that makes me very happy.' cg



Flexing his specs: Woody Allen, above, is that rare thing – a director who has the luxury of being able to make movies about any subject he chooses. Below: guitar man. Sean Penn stars in Allen's fictional jazz biopic Sweet and Lowdown

Is 19p too much to invest to find your lifetime partner?

By return of post we will send you details, in complete confidence, of people we think could be ideally suited to you!

What sort of people join a dating agency like Dateline? Well actually, it's people just like you!

In fact recent research reveals as many as 1 in 5 unattached men and women turn to dating agencies to start relationships. And the researchers say this figure is set to DOUBLE over the next five years!

Social patterns and trends have simply changed making the age old role of the matchmaker more relevant than ever.

More and more people are joining from all over the country – from villages, market towns and cities. The problems of meeting people are not confined to any particular locality. The backgrounds and occupations of Dateline members are equally varied – GP's, surveyors, solicitors, engineers, surgeons, journalists, teachers, secretaries, stockbrokers, nurses, chemists, receptionists, bus drivers and even zoo keepers. Looking for a partner is not confined to any class or category.

What all Dateline members have in common is a considerate attitude towards meeting new people.

How does Dateline work?

You choose the sort of people you want to meet yourself! After completing a comprehensive questionnaire your information is carefully compiled and the matching process, in which your data is compared with that of every other member begins. The most compatible matches will be found and their details forwarded to you immediately. Your details can likewise show up on matches from other members and they will contact you, and so a whole new social life begins.

Dateline also has a member's helpline open during the day, evenings and at the weekend.

A few documented Dateline experiences.

"a few more letters passed between us and then she phoned me" – "It was a wonderful phone call – absolutely brilliant". "I can certainly say that it was the best thing I've ever done!"
A.H. Derby

"when we tell people how we met, they all think it's a great idea! I just wanted to meet a kind and caring person – and I did!"
J.C. Lancs.

"I actually asked Karen to marry me on the third date" – "All my friends at work said I was stupid – until they met Karen of course!!"
G.C. Suffolk

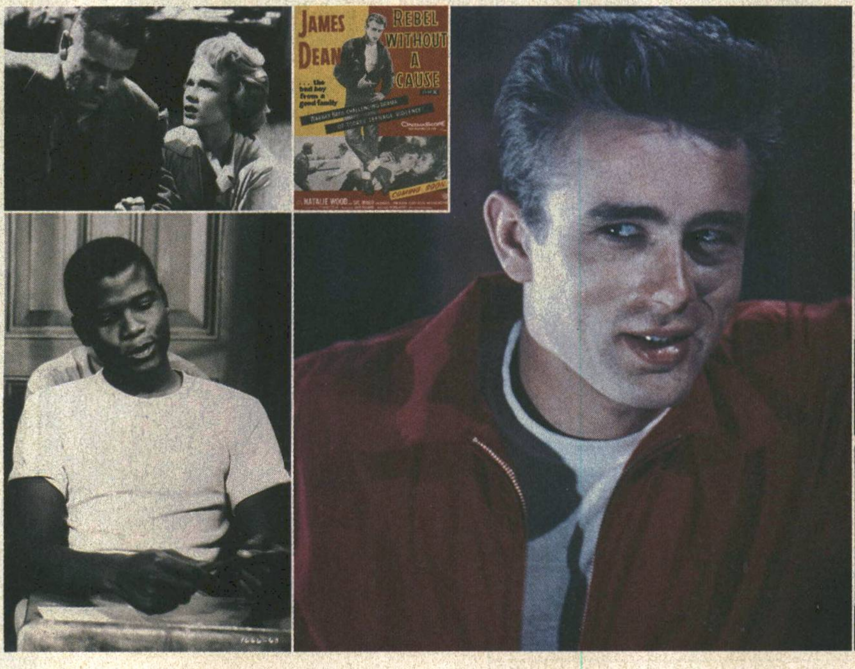
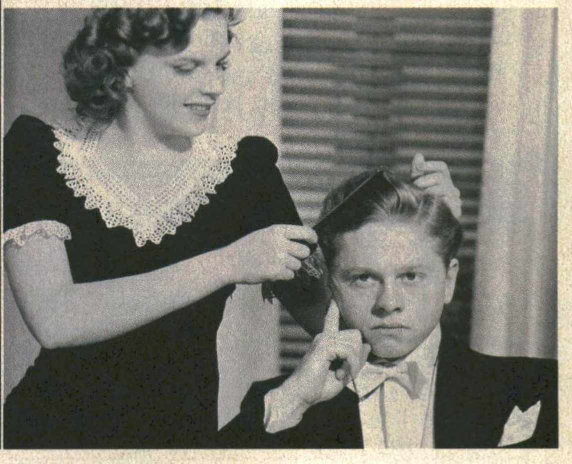
In the 1950s, young film-goers at last could identify with a new wave of teen characters who were every bit as mixed-up as they were

Teenage flicks





Untamed youth: clockwise from above: Sidney Poitier in Blackboard Jungle; Glenn Ford and Anne Francis in Blackboard Jungle; James Dean in Rebel without a Cause; Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney in Andy Hardy Meets a Debutante

Photos: Moviestore, Ronald Grant Archive, Steve Benbow

IN THE CRY BABY KILLER, a 1958 quickie starring a young Jack Nicholson as a high school homicidal maniac, an elderly character snaps, 'Teenagers! We never had 'em when I was a kid.' There was a feeling about in the 1950s that previous generations of young Americans, all the way back to Tom Sawyer, had been too busy fighting wars or scrabbling through depressions to get into all this trouble and that all the kids needed was a proper haircut, a hit song with lyrics you could understand and a red-white-and-blue flag to salute.

Actually, there had been teenagers in movies before: notably Mickey Rooney in the endless Andy Hardy series, a good-hearted lad who got into scrapes but finally listened to the sensible advice of his father, a judge. That was MGM boss Louis B Mayer's idea of America, and Hardy's world – like that of the 1950s sitcoms explored in the recent movie Pleasantville – was more of a fantasyland than Oz, where teen runaway Dorothy had real problems like vengeful witches and adults who consistently lie to her. From the birth of cinema, there were moralistic stories about what came to be called juvenile delinquency: the 1920s had flappers and bathtub gin to worry about in the likes of Our Dancing Daughters, the 1930s brought stories of good-kids-gone-bad like Reefer Madness and the war years even managed home-front alarmism in Youth Runs Wild.

These were all tut-tut-tut films, and so was the big breakthrough of 1955, Richard Brooks's Blackboard Jungle. Like many films to come (Stand and Deliver, Dangerous Minds), this is basically about a committed inner-city teacher (Glenn Ford) who works hard to reach his underprivileged pupils and winds up by redeeming a smart kid (Sidney Poitier) from a life of crime.

Parents drew an improving lesson from the film, but kids were more likely to be swept up by the infectious rhythms of the platter spun under the credits (Bill Haley's Rock around the Clock) and admire the lip-curling, hep-talking head troublemaker (Vic Morrow). The oldies and the filmmakers were shocked, but it was obvious that a teen audience identified so much with the junior hoodlum that subsequent films were pitched at the leather-jacket rather than leather-elbow-patched-jacket generations, a trend still running in Hollywood 45 years later.

If Blackboard Jungle was tabloid sociology, then Nicholas Ray's Rebel without a Cause - the film that really invented teenage rebellion - was pop psychology, showing that lack of parenting skills and an emphasis on material rather than spiritual wealth leads inevitably to alienated kids. Again, the message audiences took away was that it was pretty cool to be an alienated kid, what with the red silk bomber jackets, necking with Natalie Wood and drag-racing over a cliff. Andy Hardy was squaresville, but James Dean as Jim Stark, lying in a gutter because he was more sensitive than any adult, was so cool he seemed straight from the fridge. Not since King Kong had a doomed, antisocial misfit been so universally appealing. Even good kids from happy homes wanted to be as alienated as Jim Stark.

Blackboard Jungle and Rebel without a Cause were major studio films with big-name directors and real stars - Rebel doesn't even have rock 'n' roll, while Blackboard ends with Morrow knocked out with the Stars and Stripes.

But the drive-in crowd took notice and soon the screens were packed with shorter, less 'significant', far more lurid efforts like High School Hellcats, Hot Rod Gang, The Cool and the Crazy, High School Confidential!, Untamed Youth and the like. Fashions have changed – we've had beach party, hippie, biker, nostalgia, punk, slacker and gangsta rap flicks – but the films and the attitudes are essentially the same. Squares bug off, the kids have taken over! cg

PICK OF THE DAY

Atlantis in the Andes
Discovery 10.30pm
Plato's mythical lost continent of Atlantis and its whereabouts have been the subject of countless theories and a recent Disney movie. In this new documentary, modern cartographer and aerial intelligence interpreter for the RAF Jim Allen travels to the peaks of the Bolivian Andes to reveal his own hypothesis. According to Allen it was not the continent of Atlantis but the island capital of the same name, built around a volcanic island, which sank into the island sea of Lake Poopo in the Bolivian Altiplano.

PICK OF THE DAY

Peter Kay – From the Top of the Tower
Paramount Comedy Channel 11.15pm
With two acclaimed TV series behind him (That Peter Kay Thing and Phoenix Nights), the Bolton comedian goes back to his stand-up roots in this performance filmed live in Blackpool. He's at his best on the subject of growing up in the 1980s (one reason he so frequently contributes to shows about the era) and it's clear that his TV work is much influenced by his comic routines. Fans of Phoenix Nights' northern club circuit supremo Brian Potter, Marc Park, Cheryl Avenue and co will not go wanting.

PICK OF THE DAY

The Lying Game
Discovery 8.00pm, 9.00pm
A new two-part documentary, shown back-to-back, looking into the peculiarly human practice of lying. Whether it's to protect a friend, to get a job, to get a date, even to blag a way into a special event, people are at it all the time. Under investigation are the good and bad in lying, including experiments with children into the mental processes that lead to lying. We also discover how the professionals detect lies, including a demonstration of 'micro-expressions', which reveal a speaker's true emotional state.

PICK OF THE DAY

Sweet and Lowdown
Sky Premier 10.10pm
Sean Penn, Samantha Morton, Uma Thurman
Woody Allen indulges his passion for jazz in this celebration of a fictional 1930s jazz guitarist. Emmet Ray (Penn) is a gifted artist who lives for his guitar but cannot relate to anyone on a human level. Self-destructive and lonely, he has plenty of women but can't commit to anyone, including a young, mute and submissive laundress Hattie (Morton) whom he abuses and then discards. Allen's loving tribute to swing, blues and ragtime also delves into the artistic temperament.

Mystery of the Alaskan Mummies
Discovery 8.00pm

This new documentary journeys to the Alaskan islands to unravel the mystery surrounding the Aleutian mummies. No ordinary human remains, these mummies hold the key to many important questions about human migration in North America. The mummies reveal a sophisticated 9000-year-old Unangan culture that once thrived in one of the most harsh environments on earth. How did the Aleuts learn to mummify, and are these the descendents of the first humans to arrive in the Americas?

In Tick Tock Timesavers, which features items you will never need nor want, the product on offer is called 'World of Me'. Have your credit cards at the ready to purchase a hat with a photo of your face dangling from it to remind your loved ones of you for as long as they wear it.

Paul Merton
Paramount Comedy Channel 12.05am
Paul Merton has proved himself the master of deadpan wit in his long-running contributions to Have I Got News for You and here, you can see his miserable persona take flight in his own sketch series. His name is Rio: Ferdinand demonstrates his defensive mettle against Manchester United's Ryan Giggs

RIO GRAND

Since leaving West Ham for Leeds, Rio Ferdinand's career has flourished. But as the highly rated defender prepares to face his former club, he tells Luke Nicoli that reports of the Hammers' demise are greatly exaggerated

THERE IS A GENERAL consensus that Rio Ferdinand's form has improved tenfold since swapping the mid-table anonymity of West Ham for the lofty heights of championship-challenging Leeds United. Yet, as his former club make the trip north to Elland Road on New Year's Day, Ferdinand insists the gulf between the two teams has been greatly exaggerated.

LIVE

Leeds United v West Ham United

Sky Sports 1, New Year's Day, 7.00pm

Certainly his £18m departure last season, allied with Frank Lampard's move to Chelsea and boss Harry Redknapp's parting of the ways, signalled a period of instability in the Hammers' camp, but Ferdinand believes new boss Glenn Roeder, himself the subject of early-season criticism, is the man to take the club forward to challenge for a European place. 'We drew 0-0 at Upton Park in August and they were a tough nut to crack,' recalls Ferdinand of the early season stalemate. 'People were talking about them going down this season but I can't see it happening. They are still a good passing side and Glenn's arrival has given many players a new lease of life.

'They've also got some great kids coming through. People already know about Joe Cole and Michael Carrick, but Jermaine Defoe is also making his mark now. He's always likely to come on and nick a goal and his time will definitely come.'

It was only five short years ago that Ferdinand was being held in similar esteem. As a fresh-faced 18-year-old, he had broken into the Hammers' side following a successful loan spell at Bournemouth and comparisons with the late Bobby Moore were plentiful. Yet despite the immense pressure placed on his young shoulders, Rio rapidly fulfilled his potential at both domestic and international level.

His record-breaking transfer to Elland Road still raised eyebrows and the outlay by boss David O'Leary was deemed excessive, but regular Champions League football last season and a realistic assault on the championship have taken Ferdinand's game to new heights. The timing of his departure was emphatic as, by his own admission, his progress was stagnating at Upton Park. 'I think the lights of London were maybe too bright for me and I needed to get back on track,' he admits. 'I've seen the mistakes I made back then and they are far behind me now. I left at the right time and the benefits are now there to see. Being made captain of Leeds has also helped give me more confidence; likewise, playing against the best players in European competition. Moving to Leeds was the best thing that could have happened to me.'

> 'Any team playing in Europe is a good team, so we don't expect any favours from whoever we play'

Certainly Ferdinand has been instrumental in Leeds' assault on the Premiership title this season. It's now 10 long years since the side last lifted the game's top prize. But according to the skipper, any form of silverware would be welcomed into the coffers this season. 'Naturally, the Premiership is the prize we all want and we believe we are well equipped to last the distance, but in all honesty, I'll take any trophy,' he admits. 'I've not won a thing in my career and I think it's the same for a lot of the young lads here, so we're determined to change that. But we owe it to the fans, too. The team have shown great potential in recent seasons, but now's the time to fulfil it.'

Without the draining distraction of their rivals' hefty Champions League schedule, Leeds are tipped to challenge Liverpool, Arsenal and Manchester United for the top prize this season. Yet they are still enjoying the distractions of a Uefa Cup campaign, a competition well within their realms of winning.

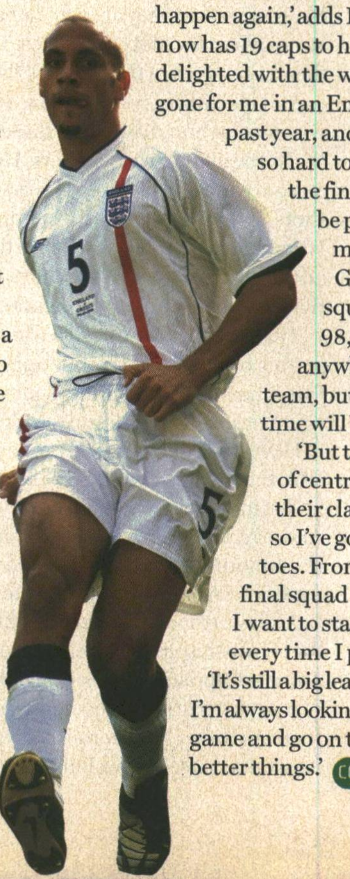
'It might not have the glamour of the Champions League, but it's still great experience for me playing in the competition,' says Ferdinand, whose side have defeated Maritimo, Troyes and Grasshoppers so far this season. 'People are expecting us to win, having reached the semis of the Champions League last season, but we can deal with that pressure. Any team playing in Europe is a good team, so we don't expect any favours from whoever we play.'

It is competition that has always kept Ferdinand on his toes and having worked his way into the England side during Sven-Göran Eriksson's tenure, he knows he must maintain his impeccable standards if he is to fulfil his ambitions of playing in this summer's World Cup finals. Having played a leading role in the crucial qualifying games against Germany and Greece, it was his commanding display in the 1-1 friendly draw against Sweden in November that saw Ferdinand singled out for praise. He admits that his improving international form is running in tandem with his domestic success, but having been left out of Kevin Keegan's Euro 2000 squad, he has learned not to take anything for granted.

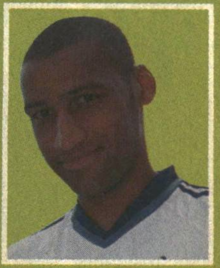
'It's well documented the effect of being left out of that squad had on me and I want to make sure that doesn't happen again,' adds Ferdinand, who now has 19 caps to his name. 'I'm delighted with the way things have gone for me in an England shirt this past year, and having worked so hard to help us get to the finals, I want to be playing when it matters. I was in Glenn Hoddle's squad for France 98, but didn't get anywhere near the team, but I hope this time will be different.

'But there are plenty of centre-backs staking their claim this season, so I've got to stay on my toes. From now until the final squad is announced, I want to stake my claim every time I play.

'It's still a big learning curve and I'm always looking to improve my game and go on to bigger and better things.' cg



ON THE SPOT



Spurs new boy Dean Richards reveals the secret of his success – the Zen-like mantra, 'Respect all your opponents equally'.

Interview: Luke Nicoli

What's the most memorable match you've played in and why?
During my Wolves days, we played Leeds in an FA Cup quarter-final at Elland Road and beat them 1-0. Nobody gave us a chance, but we defended really well for the full 90 minutes, soaked up a lot of pressure and then hit them on the counter-attack whenever we could. We scored with one such attack through Don Goodman with just eight minutes left; Leeds then threw everything at us and right at the death they won a penalty when Jimmy Floyd Hasselbaink went down. Thankfully he missed the resulting spot kick and it was an incredible feeling when the final whistle blew. The cup run that year will always live with me and it is some consolation that we got knocked out in the semis to Arsenal, who went on to win the double.

Who was your footballing hero and why?
Bryan Robson was always the player I tried to emulate in the playground. He was everybody's hero back in the Eighties – the England captain and someone who didn't mind getting stuck in for the cause. Although he had great battling qualities in the centre of midfield, he would get forward at every opportunity and score plenty of goals. He was at the end of his career when the glory days returned to Man United, but he was the Roy Keane of his time. A legend.

Which team did you support and why?
I'm Bradford born and bred, so I always followed my local team. I was very fortunate and privileged to join the club as a schoolboy, and to play at Valley Parade, in front of my family and friends, was a dream come true. I used to love watching John Hendrie score goals – he was everybody's hero – but my favourite player as a kid was Stuart McCall during his first spell at the club. Another Bryan Robson-type player, he pulled the strings. I hope that's not making him sound too old!

What's the best piece of footballing advice you've been given?
When we played at Bradford, the youth team coaches always told us to respect all our opponents equally. That way, we would not get complacent when playing teams from lower divisions and likewise, we would not be overawed when coming up against bigger, more established stars. That's something that has stayed with me and it has made me stay focused whoever I'm playing.

So how are you settling in at Tottenham?
Very well. It's been a dream to link up with Glenn Hoddle again, having learned so much from him during my spell at Southampton. This season is going to be a settling-in period for me, but I am a very ambitious man and would love to represent my country at some point. I think that can be achieved as long as I keep learning from Glenn and playing well for such a big club.

He finished 2001 as the world's youngest ever No 1. But can tennis's latest wonder kid win on home soil in the Australian Open? Interview: Nick Callow

Can Hewitt do it?

THERE WILL PROBABLY BE a few scruffy youngsters knocking around Melbourne Park when the Australian Open starts this month. Long, sun-bleached hair tucked under reversed baseball caps, sporting baggy T-shirts and shorts, with scuffed-up trainers normally completing the look. Few, if any, of those young men will stand out from the crowd. Fewer still will have the odd million in the bank, and only one of them will be the world's greatest tennis player. That'll be Lleyton Hewitt.

The brash star from Adelaide looks like any other 20-year-old tennis fan and still has a poster of Andre Agassi on his garage wall. But this year Hewitt wants more than an image of his idol to look at; Hewitt wants the American's Australian Open trophy to add to his spoils back home.

Hewitt is now regarded as Australia's favourite sporting son, following the semi-retirement of Pat Rafter, and he enters tennis's first Grand Slam event of the year rated by many experts as the most likely to succeed in Melbourne. Already the reigning US Open Champion, Hewitt finished 2001 as the world's youngest ever No 1 and shows no signs of slowing down.

It has been argued his precocious talent and character is now acting as a one-man life-support system for an ailing men's tennis circuit, but he was tipped as a future world champion before he won his first tournament in Adelaide, aged just 16. Four years on, and his successes in 2001 mean those notoriously fanatical Australian tennis fans will now be demanding nothing less than outright victory in Melbourne this month.

The thoughts and fears of carrying a nation's hopes have hindered some of the game's greatest players in the past, most notably the Brits at Wimbledon, but Hewitt is one of a rare breed that thrives in the most intense situations.

'I don't really feel too much pressure playing in Australia,' he reveals. 'I think the guys in the past have struggled playing here just because of the weight of expectations. I don't really feel that. I feel that this is where I was brought up, the conditions and the climate suit me, the courts suit me. There are so many bonuses. Plus, I have the crowd on my side.

'Melbourne Park means a lot to me,' he adds. 'I've been to the Open there ever since I was nine or 10. And when I walk around, I can feel a buzz. It really does lift you up to be an Australian player walking along those corridors.'

LIVE

Hewitt resists suggestions that his personality has changed from the first time he used to make the trek to Melbourne as a wide-eyed spectator. As a player, however, he is in a different league from those formative years.

'As a person I don't think I've changed much; as a player I think my game has become better and better each year. That comes with more experience on the tour. It comes with a bit more strength over the last two years as well. And better results have helped build my confidence, too. I've been able to step it up and my ranking has got higher and higher each year.'

So just what can Hewitt and his opponents expect when they step out, like modern-day gladiators, into the intense heat in front of the partisan Antipodean crowd this year? The young Australian predicts: 'They can get very loud in Melbourne, but they are very fair as well. It makes a good atmosphere for a lot of matches. They enjoy tennis and they enjoy sport; I think that is the main thing.'

And Hewitt enjoys whacking a tennis ball for the fans who inspire him. Like Boris Becker, Agassi and John McEnroe in their early careers, Hewitt still knows no fear on court and adds, 'When I go out on the court I go for my shots, I do what I believe in out there. I don't hold back, I don't have any fears when I'm on the tennis court. I respect all the other players off the court, that's for sure, as I think that's part of being very professional.

'I just love being around tennis courts,' he adds. 'I love getting out there and competing. To be earning a good living, travelling the world, seeing different sights, different countries, different cultures – it's a dream.'

Hewitt will have his rivals, of course. If Gustavo Kuerten is fit, the Brazilian will be looking to regain the No 1 status he lost to Hewitt at the end of last year. Then there is Andre Agassi aiming to defend his title, Wimbledon champion Goran Ivanisevic, and fellow youngsters, American Andy Roddick and the Russian Marat Safin.

And even though the women's game is at an all-time high, the Hewitt-inspired rejuvenation of the men's game means Jennifer Capriati's defence of her title is likely to take a back seat in terms of attention. For all eyes will be on one young man. As Rafter so generously says, 'Lleyton is the best Australia has seen for a long, long time.' cg

MERCEDES CHAMPIONSHIP GOLF

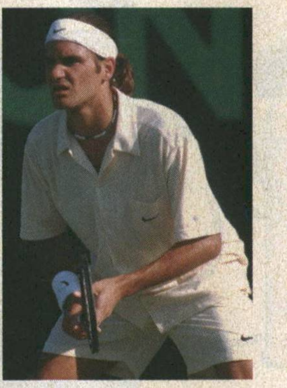
Sky Sports 2
Thursday 3rd
1.00am

Don't miss the opening day's play from the Mercedes Championship at the rather beautiful Plantation Course in Maui. American Ryder Cup player Jim Furyk (right) won here last year on his first outing after returning from a freak wrist injury, sustained three months previously. Furyk's one-shot victory on a very windy last day proved to be the highlight of his season, because he failed to win again. Even so, he still finished 13th on the US PGA Tour money list with over $2.5m of winnings.

ATP TENNIS IN MILAN

British Eurosport
Wednesday 30th 1.00pm

The ATP Tour event in Milan, starting on Monday 28th, sees Switzerland's Roger Federer (below) defending his first ever senior title. The 20-year-old beat number two seed Yevgeny Kafelnikov among others on the way to last year's final, where he conquered the unseeded Frenchman Julien Boutter in three sets. Federer, who is forecast for a big future on the Tour, had lost both his two previous finals. Also, watch out for Great Britain's Greg Rusedski, who made the semi-finals here last year.



AFRICAN NATIONS CUP

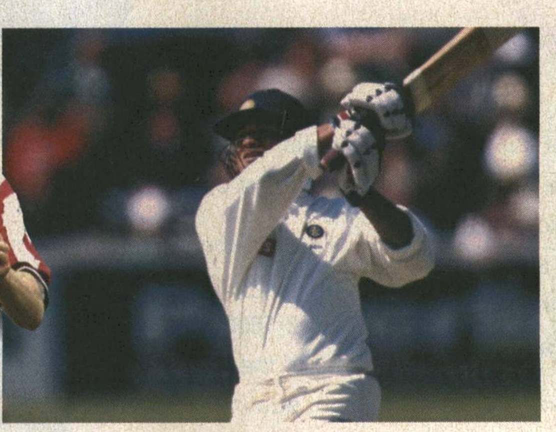
British Eurosport
from Sunday 20th 7.30pm

This bi-annual tournament is one of the most thrilling in the world as most of the 16 African nations play fast, open football to claim bragging rights on their continent. England's World Cup groupmates Nigeria, whose Kanu of Arsenal is pictured above, top, were runners-up in 2000 and again start as favourites along with holders Cameroon. Both countries, along with Senegal, South Africa and Tunisia, will be warming up for the World Cup. The hosts of the three-week extravaganza, Mali, make a rare appearance in the tournament, which is being staged for the 23rd time.

SOUTHAMPTON V MANCHESTER UNITED

Pay-per-view
Sunday 13th 2.00pm

Gordon Strachan has jumped from frying pan to fire this season, after parting company from Coventry City early on and his subsequent appointment as manager at Southampton. But the Saints have failed to pull up any trees under his stewardship, and today his team faces the troubled but still menacing Manchester United. It wasn't unusual for the Reds to lose at the Saints' daunting old ground, The Dell, but they are likely to be more confident in their new stadium, which is proving to have much less of an intimidation factor. Strachan will hope for goals from the likes of Marian Pahars (right).



INDIA V ENGLAND ONE-DAY INTERNATIONAL

Sky Sports 2
Monday 21st 4.30am

England's controversial tour of India gets into its One-Day International phase with a day/night match in Chennai. First, England's actual participation was in doubt, then the Indian team faced ball tampering allegations. Indian players, including Sachin Tendulkar (above), were punished during their South Africa tour in November by none other than ex-England skipper Mike Denness. It's time for the off-the-field shenanigans to take a back seat as both teams try to get off to a winning start in this five-match series.

ALAN CURBISHLEY

Coverage of the African Nations Cup and the FA Cup offers plenty of excuses for football fans not to leave their armchairs. But Alan believes both tournaments have their fair share of problems. Illustration: Chris Hogg

MANY FOOTBALL FANS WILL be looking forward to watching the African Nations Cup on British Eurosport this month. But it's a tournament that poses a club-or-country dilemma for African internationals plying their trade in Britain – something we at Charlton are familiar with, as our striker Shaun Bartlett is the captain of South Africa.

The African football authorities want their players to play in the Premiership, the best league in the world, in order to further their footballing education – but the countries' international fixtures clash horribly with European league fixtures. Now, there's a chance that will all change next year, but, as it stands, the African Nations Cup is a very long competition and those Premiership players that receive call-ups miss many vital league games at an incredibly important time of the season.

Leeds were extremely unhappy about losing South African Lucas Radebe for weeks at a time, and our other South African player, Mark Fish, encountered similar pressure when he was at Bolton Wanderers, which was the reason he felt he had to retire from international duty – and Fish was one of the biggest players South Africa have ever had.

We've suffered because of this before: Shaun Bartlett was off playing for his national side last season on the weekend we visited Sunderland, when we still had a chance of getting into Europe. We were beaten and that was our European dream over – and Shaun might have made all the difference.

At the time of writing Bartlett has made a statement that he will not be playing for South Africa, and there has been a suggestion that if he doesn't, he won't be selected to play in the World Cup, which would be a real shame as he's their best player. But if he was to change his mind, then he knows he's letting his club down – and we are already stretched and depleted by injuries. So he's in a terrible position. I just hope common sense prevails.

A cup competition that I am a lot more enthusiastic about is the FA Cup, the third round of which begins this month.

It has been said that the bigger Premiership clubs seem more interested in reaping the financial rewards of the Champions League. Now that is detrimental to the FA Cup. The prize money in the Cup has been increased this year to make it more attractive to those sides, but if it was possible to offer a Champions League place to the winner, the FA Cup would suddenly be taken extremely seriously. It's fantastic that there is more prize money, of course, but it has to match what the bigger clubs can make in Europe. For the FA Cup to return to its former glory, then the rewards simply have to be greater than they are at present.

But if anyone needs proof that the Cup still has its old magic, then they need only to remember our encounters with Conference side Dagenham & Redbridge last season, when they managed to take us to a replay. Those games summed up what the FA Cup is all about. There are many results you can predict quite confidently when the draws are announced, but there's always the chance of an upset.

We first faced Dagenham at the Valley after having just beaten Arsenal on New Year's Day. But we were treating them very seriously – I had had them watched three times and knew exactly what we were up against. But I never expected them to play anything like they did; they played out of their skins, and we were lucky to get a draw. I changed the side dramatically in the replay at their ground, and, again, we were very lucky to nick a winner – and we were in the top half of the Premiership at the time.

But you can't win with those sorts of games: if you win on the day, you're the bad guys because everyone wants the underdogs to go through, and if you lose you get slaughtered in the press and by the fans.

I have to admit, Dagenham really scared the life out of us. That's the nearest we've come to a major slip-up – it's normally the other way round, with us causing the upset.

We face Blackpool at The Valley this month and I would certainly welcome a run in the Cup; it would mean a lot more games, but then the players would rather be playing than training.
